

Framing the Future of Training and Development

Wednesday 1st February 2012

The Halifax Conference Centre, Sheffield

Why should representatives attend?

CUBO have organised this event, which is free to attend, to help and support members with the implementation of systematic training and development initiatives within your University. This information will help to frame the future of training and development, and support the sector's focus on the student experience for 2012 and beyond.

Who should attend?

The event is aimed at key staff within your organisation who have a responsibility for training and development. This may be a member of staff solely dedicated to the training function, or an operational manager with a responsibility and interest in the training and development of their staff and the business.

What will we get out of the day?

The objectives of the day are as follows:-

- To identify training programmes and related quality initiatives that other organisations currently use, and the benefits from their implementation.
- To generate ideas and solutions to training needs through discussion groups facilitated by dedicated training professionals.
- To explore the need for a Post Graduate/Masters Qualification specifically designed for CUBO.
- To discuss and identify the training needs and continuous development of staff involved in the management and delivery of training at their institutions. Additionally, identify how these needs could be supported.
- To identify the types of training programmes that should be available for CUBO via University Hospitality Seminars Ltd.
